From small teams to large practices, to pro bono networks, NACC serves a variety of organizations interested in child welfare law, practice, and policy.

ORGANIZATIONAL MEMBERSHIP RATES

Organizational membership rates are determined by the number of intended users in your office or unit who are not Child Welfare Law Specialists or students. (NACC Child Welfare Law Specialists and students already receive a complimentary NACC membership.)

The rate is determined by the number of users in your organization who you intend to have access to NACC’s benefits and services. To register as an organizational member, complete NACC’s Organizational Membership Enrollment Form or register at NACCchildlaw.org/organizations.

Organizations are defined as a single office or unit dedicated to child and family practice or policy. For example, the Juvenile Rights Practice housed within the Legal Aid Society qualifies as an organizational member, not the entire Legal Aid Society. Likewise, for statewide representation systems, organizational memberships apply to the specific unit providing child welfare representation. In this example, the Office of the Law Guardian housed within the Office of the Public Defender qualifies as an organizational member, not the entire Public Defender system. The total number of users should include pro bono attorneys intended to have access to organizational membership benefits.

Once your organization is registered, your group administrator will receive an email and link with instructions to manage your organizational membership and invite your team members to register their individual profile in NACC’s membership portal. Once registered, your staff will have instant access to their benefits for the term of the organizational membership. Group administrators may add/subtract team members alongside staffing changes. Our staff is available to support your team’s enrollment and benefits access.
